LEGACY MAPPED

Your Digital Estate Checklist

Nine categories to cover — so nothing gets left behind.

Most people have well over a hundred online accounts by the time they stop and think about it — email, banking, streaming, shopping, super, social media, cloud storage. None of it is written down anywhere your family could find it. Work through each category below at your own pace: tick the box once you've listed what exists, not once everything is perfectly organised.

- ☐ 01 Email accounts
  List every email address you actively use. Email is the master key to everything else — most “forgot password” flows route through it.
- ☐ 02 Social profiles
  Facebook, Instagram, LinkedIn and similar. Decide in advance whether you want each memorialised or deleted, and note it here.
- ☐ 03 Cloud storage & photos
  Google Photos, iCloud, Dropbox — wherever your files live. Often the most sentimentally important and easiest to overlook.
- ☐ 04 Banking & financial accounts
  Everyday accounts, buy-now-pay-later, and any neobank or fintech accounts a family might not know exist.
- ☐ 05 Cryptocurrency
  Treat separately. Self-custody wallets have no password reset and no recovery process — if lost, it's gone.
- ☐ 06 Subscriptions
  Streaming, software, gym memberships — anything charging automatically until someone actively cancels it.
- ☐ 07 Devices
  Phones, laptops, tablets. Note who should inherit each device, and separately, how to unlock it.
- ☐ 08 Other digital assets
  Domain names, loyalty points, digital purchases (ebooks, games, app credit) — easy to forget, sometimes genuinely valuable.
- ☐ 09 Government & utility accounts
  myGov, energy, telco, insurance portals. Administratively important, not sentimental — but they need closing or transferring.

A note on passwords: don't write actual passwords into this document. Use a free password manager (we recommend Bitwarden) and record only which accounts exist and what to do with each one.
